FROM THE RABBINIC TEAM: LEVIIM

The beginning of Parashat Naso describes how the Leviim were assigned the task of disassembling the Mishkan when the nation would disembark, transporting the Mishkan during travel, and rebuilding it at the next encampment. We know the Leviim for their role as educators and priests, responsible for the spiritual inspiration of the community. Why were they also responsible for the Mishkan? Rav Yehuda Amital zt'l pointed out that the role of Torah leaders is to "transport" the Torah, to ensure its successful transplantation from one generation to another: "Throughout history, Am Yisrael has passed through different places, and the world has progressed and developed beyond measure. The Torah, in contrast, has never changed. There is always a fear that the Torah will become obsolete, irrelevant to later generations. The Rishonim addressed this problem and explained that in every generation the Torah must be interpreted in terms of that generation, so its message for each era will be revealed. Chiddushei Ha-Rim explains that the function of the tzadik in each generation is to find the significance of the Torah for that generation, just as the Levi'im used to examine the characteristics of each place and decide accordingly where to erect the Mishkan." Together it is our job to transport and build the Mishkan – a dwelling place for Hashem – that maintains the beauty, the details and the specifics of the original, yet is appropriate for the terrain and the characteristics of our lives.
